Tells Cantor's Peace Contest
Agent He Doesn't Know
Meaning of Plagiarism

By The Associated Press
NEW YORK, April 14—Eighteen-year-old Lloyd Lewis of Pittsburgh Mo. sat in a Manhattan skyscraper office last night and saw his dream of a college education swept away because he didn't understand the meaning of plagiarism.

Lloyd announced as the winner of a $5,000 prize essay contest sponsored by F. D. Cantor, the comedian known as a thing but he was disqualified because he had plagiarized word for word part of a magazine article written several months ago by Dr. Frank Kingdon, president of New York university.

Cantor's contest was for a peace essay and Dr. Kingdon's article had been on the same subject.

He doesn't understand the meaning of plagiarism, the farm youth turned to question.

What is plagiarism? he asked. Informed I readily admitted copying Dr. Kingdon's article and submitting it as his own in the contest.

Sure I copied the article, he told his astounded audience. I don't see anything wrong in that. It was much better than I could have done. I wanted to win the contest and go to college so I just looked up a lot of magazine articles and picked out what I thought was the best. I didn't copy it all though. I just took enough paragraphs to make it the right length. I counted the words.

Lloyd was to be sent back to Pittsburgh by plane with his transportation paid.

To Pick New Winner
From a list of 13 other final lists in the contest for which over 200,000 entries were received the judges will select another winner. Ben F. Holzman, Cantor's agent, said.

Cantor in a prepared statement said.

I feel badly—it's a terrible thing. I don't think the boy thought he was doing anything that wasn't on the square. He was trying to get a college education. I hate to see him suffer from what seems on the surface an honest mistake but of course he does not get the scholarship.

ON THE POLITICAL FRONT

Frank Knox

By The Associated Press
Frank Knox, Chicago publisher through frequent speeches has won himself a position as an issue-definer for his party.

Whether or not he is chosen as the Republican candidate he is expected to be heard in vigorous criticism of the new deal from one end of the land on the other before November.

He was one of the first to begin hammering at Roosevelt policies. He hit high taxes, demanded a balanced budget and sound currency and challenged the administration to restore private enterprise to its rightful owners. He finally announced his candidacy.

He is an energetic speaker, a proposer of programs, a maker of opportunity. His entire career has been of the same pattern. He enlisted in 1918's Rough Riders and won a lieutenant's commission in the World War. He began his professional career as a cub reporter and emerged publisher of a great Chicago daily.

Letters from Our Readers

"SOMETHING HAYWIRE"
Editor of The Star: The spearhead of true democracy is a result of true democracy is a result of force. But when that combination folds up its tent for political greed and surrenders to one directed force it is leading too much faith in a man instead of an institution where the fundamental proportion as vision is to progress as rank is to file will sooner or later be jeopardized.

While it may be true in meeting the quick shifting of international affairs today it is necessary to vary away from such a mental picture to meet certain emergencies it should never be carried to a state of affairs where we have burnt the bridges behind us through not realizing the ship of states bridge should have been crossed a good many times before we arrived there. Or in other words while not holding true to direct form of democracy we should not venture beyond the utilization of indirectness in order to be able to return to such.

With the President's own political party so strongly in power and him asking for such large appropriations for spending with the power he allocated himself to reveal there is something haywire somewhere why the legislative branch of our government should be hindered from having a full go on such matters.

COLD WINTER CAUSE OF SMALL PIG CROP

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., April 14—The rigors of Ohio's last winter were blamed by animal specialists today for reducing the spring crop of pigs in the state 13 1/2 per cent below the reduction of 20 per cent under the invalidated agricultural adjustment act. Thousands of new-born pigs perished during the sub-zero weather in addition to reduction in the normal birth rate by about half. J. S. Coffey of Ohio State university said the state normally produced about 2,600,000 pigs yearly.

21 ASSIGNED TO CCC CAMPS

Marion County Group Placed After Passing Examination in Mansfield.

Twenty-one youths from Marion city and county were enrolled at Mansfield yesterday in the federal government's civilian conservation corps. After passing physical examinations they were assigned to CCC camps in Ohio.

The enrollment was under the direction of James Rein, FERA liquidating auditor in charge of Marion county CCC enlistments. He brought to 72 the number enrolled in three quotas during 1936. No additional quota has been definitely announced but another is anticipated in July, Mr. Rein said.

Of those enrolled at Mansfield yesterday, three colored youths were assigned to the Portsmouth CCC camp. They were James Clark of 496 Ballentine avenue, Earl L. West of 552 Polk street and Pringle Wingo of 976 North State street. Three other youths, J. C. Alexander of near Prospect, Herman Bowers of 728 East Farming street and Robert Brady of 499 Grant street, were sent to the Van dale O. CCC camp.

The remaining 14 were assigned to the camp at Friendship O. They were John Bristley of 392 Oak street, Eugene Elliott of 701 May street, Paul Hart of 396 Silver street, Joseph Hennessy of 616 Evans street, Harrison Hoffman of 224 Quarry street, John Hoskins of 191 Harrison street, Dale Hudson of 101 North Main street, Franklin Huntman of 953 North State street, Edward Jackson of 303 Uncepher avenue, Kermit Kunkle of 369 Millburn avenue, Gerald McKnight of 596 Bartram avenue, Harold Melvin of 543 Henry street, Rufus Messinger of 722 Herman street, Arden Ritor of 722 Herman street and Jess Francis of 772 West Center street.

NEW BREAK FORESEEN IN TOWNSEND PROBE

Representatives Secretive as They Plan Resumption of Inquiry in California.

By The Associated Press
LOS ANGELES, April 14.—Congressional investigators moved secretly today on a hunt for new evidence on the Townsend old age pension organization amid hints of startling developments and a warning to be "fair."

Plans were afoot for public hearings to be started here possibly tomorrow, but secrecy cloaked the movements of representatives Joseph A. Gavan, Democrat of New York and Samuel Collins, Republican of California.

Reliable sources said they were seeking corroboration of perhaps the most important evidence yet unearthed.

More than 2,000 persons attending a meeting yesterday heard Frank Arbutnot, national director, say "we are not opposed to an investigation but we are opposed to any inequity."

E. J. Margalit, manager of the northern California area, told the crowd the congressional investigation will be given everything they ask for when they reach San Francisco, but they will be as welcome as smallpox.

GRAPHIC MOVIES AID IN SAFETY CAMPAIGN

By International News Service
KANSAS CITY.—An automobile runs swiftly through a stop sign and crashes into another car. An other automobile zigzags along a road on top a cliff and suddenly dives over the embankment to be reduced to a heap of junk far below. Sirens scream and ambulances jerk to a stop load up with accident victims and rush away.

"Nice scene," says Elmer H. W. Johnson, police safety inspector. "Mighty good. In fact, it was all most perfect."

It's all a part of an educational film being screened by the Kansas City police in the interests of safety. News cameramen are on the spot to catch every detail of the accidents, including the violations or carelessness that caused them. Victims are made to appear more realistic by liberal applications of tomato catsup.

The scene showing the car going over the cliff starts with two men who are supposed to be mixing gin with gasoline and is so well carried out a junk dealer politely declines to bid on the remains of the car.

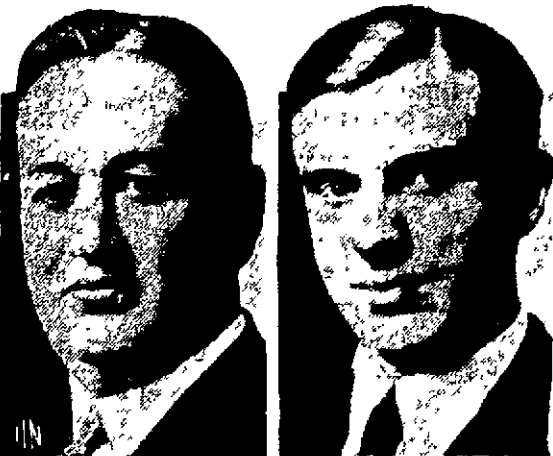

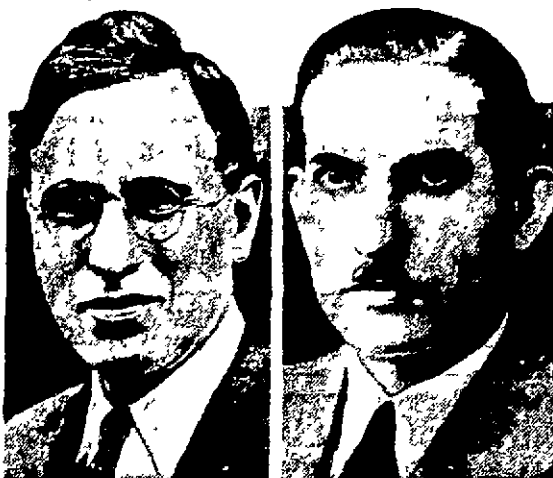

South Africa is emerging from the severest Arctic weather known in years.

SWISS CHEESE HOLES MAKE FLYING SAFER

Perforated "Split Flap" on Trailing Edge of Plane Wing Facilitates Landing.

By The Associated Press
DAYTON, O., April 14.—The structural principle of the holes in Swiss cheese is applied to aviation for the first time in a safety device under test by the material division of the U. S. Air corps at Wilbur Wright field.

This new function for holes in flying already successfully used on a Northrop attack ship was made public today. The holes are the diameter of the can standard 50-cent can size.

They perforate a "split flap" which is a part attached to the trailing edge of an airplane wing and is well-known as a safety device for landing.

There are two flaps in this attack ship one for each wing. In each there are about 50 holes with about half the area of the flap holes.

In this attack ship when the pilot wished to descend and let solid regulation flaps droop they sent up turbulent waves in the air behind the wings which caused part of the plane to shimmy.

Perforating the flaps stopped the shimmy completely. Flight with the Swiss parts proved

CORRECT POSTURE REDUCES WAISTLINE

Physician Asserts Proper Breathing Also Helps "Bay Window"

By United Press
DETROIT.—Words of cheer are offered the middle age man with a "bay window."

Dr. William J. Kerr of San Francisco told the American College of Physicians in Harper hospital that the bulging waistline is not a necessary adjunct of middle life.

The midriff surplus, Dr. Kerr said, is primarily a postural defect caused by improper breathing. An erect carriage coupled with breathing methods that permit full play of the diaphragm will do much toward returning the Apollo-like figure of youth, he said.

Dr. Kerr recommended an abdominal belt for those who found it difficult to maintain proper posture.

Speaking on hemorrhoids, Dr. Roger I. Lee of Boston advocated squeezing the juices from meat on an open cut as an effective stoppage to bleeding.

The meat juice method, Dr. Lee reported has proved far more effective than the use of other agents such as snake venom where bleeding is external and reachable by this means.

The best means of combating internal cases is by blood transfusions from persons with normal blood platelets, he said.

Dr. Lee said that a beginner was found dead recently in a stable, his end home in Saint Julien, near the town of Saint Julien, in a dejected if it leath was for to ex- pensive and lack of food near his 100 was found and 1000 in currency and 1000 in currency.

RAYON SPUN SO FINE POUND CAN SPAN U. S.

Thread About One-Third Thinner Than Finest Silk, Chemical Society is Told.

By The Associated Press
KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 14.—A string spanning the United States from New York to San Francisco would unroll from a single one-pound ball of new dress goods fiber described to the American Chemical society here yesterday.

With this artificial stuff, a rayon, man for the first time has definitely outdone nature in fineness of diameter. The new fiber is about one-third thinner than finest silk and would unwind to a length of 2,500 miles per pound, compared with 1,000 miles a pound for rayon previously developed.

Several manufacturers have perfected the new weave simultaneously. All the processes were described in a general report on chemistry's progress toward improving artificial dress goods presented by Dr. Ernest B. Berger, general assistant director of the chemical department of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

Dr. Berger said that these latest fibers are so fine that a woman's vest made of them alone could be concealed in the palm of one hand.

HEAVY DEMOCRATIC VOTE IS PREDICTED

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., March 14—
George M. Neffner, statistician and election expert of the secretary of state's office, said yesterday that Democrats would outvote Republicans at the May 12 primary for the first time possibly in Ohio history.

Recalling that the Democratic party came within 20,000 votes of the Republican primary total two years ago, Neffner said he felt certain they would surpass the Republicans this year. He also said he expected the total primary vote to be larger this year than two years ago.

RENT STATE PAYS
FOR BUILDING CUT

By The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, O., April 14—The state obtained today a reduction of $8,500 on the $20,500 annual rental of the Ohio Hartman building which houses the state liquor department and bureau of motor vehicles.

The reduction was made in amendments to the lease signed by Carl G. Wahl, state director of public works. Retroactive to Jan. 1, it is effective for five years and will result in a net saving of $10,000.

Your Health

BY DR. R. S. COPELAND

Hemoptysis.
TO MOST persons the sight of blood is a distressing experience. It sometimes causes great alarm. The red fluid may induce faintness for the onlooker and for the victim the loss of blood may produce a real fainting spell.

The presence of blood in the sputum is sometimes a reason for alarm and anxiety. Undoubtedly this fear can be traced to the universal but erroneous belief that the presence of blood in the sputum is a sure sign of consumption. Everyone dreads this disease and any symptom that indicates its existence is disturbing. But let me assure you that the presence of blood in the sputum is not a definite sign of tuberculosis.

Of course it is a fact that in the advanced stages the victim has this symptom. But it is not true that everyone who expectorates blood or has blood stained sputum is infected with this disease.

Hemoptysis is the word used by doctors to indicate the presence of blood in the sputum. This symptom may be due to a simple ron-gestion inflammation or broken tissues in the throat.

If you have ever had a severe sore throat, inflamed tonsils or bronchitis you perhaps noticed that the increased sputum and mucus were blood tinged. This symptom is not unusual in persons having severe hacking coughs. It is due to the strain and rupture of small blood vessels in the inflamed tissues.

Another common cause for hemoptysis is faulty bridge work which elips and irritates the gums.
It may result from a loose tooth which cuts the tongue or gum.
Nasal deformities slight nose bleed from a tiny ulcer and other inflammations of the upper air passages may result in the dripping of a small amount of blood into the mouth.

Too often the victim of hemoptysis in his fear of tuberculosis avoids consulting a doctor. He fears he will be told that he has tuberculosis. This is unfortunate.
In most instances the symptom is a trivial one and the fear is groundless.

Of course the persistent presence of blood in the sputum must not be disregarded. It is a signal calling for an investigation.

inquiries from readers who send addressed stamped envelopes with

"I doped it out this way. Since those SOHIO fellows could tell me what was what last Winter, then why shouldn't they be able to tell me a thing or two this Spring?"

"So I said 'Fill 'er up' when they told me that this Spring grade X-70 is a sure-fire cure for bucking and stalling this time of the year."

"Next, I had the old boat given a lubrication from stem to stern. And I'll have to hand it to those SOHIO fellows for knowing how to do it point by point. When I pulled out of there, my car ran as a car should run."

"Better change the oil, too," I told them. "And put in an oil that's plenty tough for, from now on, I'll be going places."

"Okay," said the salesman. "What you want is SOHIO."

"You took the words right out of my mouth," said I. "You see, I learned about this last Winter too."

Skeptical.

It is unlikely state department officials will commit themselves in replying to the proposal of President Jorge Ubin of Guatemala for an American League of Nations and a permanent court of justice. In the past the state has decisively shown itself unwilling to involve the United States in the other League of Nations and its court, and the fundamental objections raised against those European agencies apply to the newer proposal.

President Ubin made his proposal in reply to President Roosevelt's invitation to the forthcoming Pan-American conference, whose agenda committee convenes this week. Under the Ubin plan, the United States and South American governments would declare adherence to the principle of the Monroe doctrine by signifying intention to avoid entanglements in old world squabbles. They would agree, also on mutual assistance pacts in the event of invasion by outside powers. The proposed court would adjust disputes and keep peace among the signatory powers.

Much has been, and can be, said for and against the work of the corresponding bodies in Europe. In the current crisis, the league heartened its believers at first by direct action in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. But as months have dragged by and tension has increased most observers agree that the league's prestige has dwindled again. Try as it will, that international body has not proved itself superior to the imperfections and conflicting desires of human beings motivated by nationalistic impulses. The record makes Americans more skeptical by far than they were when a resolute block of senators kept the United States out of the League of Nations after the World War. The present administration, so much given to testing theories, will be justified in showing reluctance to offer the United States as a guinea pig for an experiment already widely discredited.

Debt Difficulties.

It's not yet June 10, the day war debt payments are due, but former Premier Edouard Herriot of France has brought up the subject of debts in an election speech anyway.

Speaking unofficially, M. Herriot does not suggest any new move for payment, but he laments the straining of relations between the United States and France caused by debt repudiation. As he puts it, this country is on "another planet" so far as any possibility of its aiding France in an emergency goes. He praises the friendliness of Mr. Hoover and Mr. Roosevelt toward France, but asserts his countrymen have lost a great opportunity to nurture the spirit of friendship by refusing to make a gesture toward payment.

After making allowances for the fact that M. Herriot's new debt observations are made in the course of a campaign speech, there still remains the significant inference that he fears present turmoil in Europe may produce a situation in which his country may want to turn to the United States for aid or credit.

It is probably too late, or not an opportune time, to reopen the whole debt question. Little can be gained from rehearsing the old debate as to whether or not the debtor nations could and should have paid something on account. Certain it is, though, that the Johnson act should be an effective barrier against further financial commitments. Since the European tangle seems likely at any moment to develop to the point where appeals for financial aid may deluge this country, already harassed taxpayers should be thankful congress has set up one breaker which may keep the flood out for a while. M. Herriot is completely right. An insulted creditor is a poor friend.

An Idea Takes Hold.

Cynics who are fond of saying that an epidemic of war fever would spread rapidly in the younger generation because it has not been immunized by first-hand experience with war have a new factor to consider.

A few weeks ago a group of Princeton undergraduates organized the Veterans of Future Wars, asking to be paid in advance the bonus which would be due them after they had fought in the next war. At the time, their schoolboyish satire was treated as nothing more than a campus stunt.

But this idea, apparently because it embodied enough of the pungent vinegar of real satire to provoke discussion, took hold. Similar groups were brought together in other colleges and universities. Even if the movement should last no longer than next June it has left its mark.

without standing in the trenches or scanning the daily casualty lists. Unfortunately, undergraduates represent only a small minority of the potential victims of war, but it is a minority with an amazing capacity for making its influence felt. It is not beyond possibility that it might force the cynics who say American youth again could be set afire by the gospel of nationalism to revise their opinion.

Real Thing.

Republicans didn't force the issue by going to be using a brain trust in the campaign of 1936, or they wouldn't have been quite so free in their ridicule of the new deal brain trust. The G. O. P. has a selling job on its hands; it must convince voters that its brain trust is better than the corresponding Democratic outfit.

As a matter of fact, the Republican plan does call for a better organization of professional intelligence than President Roosevelt has been using. Actually, the new deal brain trust never was a brain trust at all. New dealers, themselves, never accepted the designation. Republicans, on the contrary, are making no bones about what they intend to do.

They will support a research organization under direction of Dr. Olin Glenn Maxon, professor of business administration at Yale university. The organization's primary function will be to analyze the new deal and expose its fallacies. Its secondary function will be to devise alternatives to new deal policies. It is announced in advance that Dr. Maxon and his associates are not interested in office-holding. To use an old phrase which tells the story, they are interested in the principle of the thing. They, of course, will be paid, too.

Such a brain trust differs from the so-called new deal brain trust in the fact that it is unified, while disunity has been the dominant characteristic of the intellectuals who have been charged with causing the Roosevelt administration to ride off in all directions at once. However mistrustful Americans may be of intelligence in the conduct of their political affairs, they must agree that if brains can save them they are bound to be saved in spite of themselves.

Old Friends Are Best.

Scanning the list of contenders for fame and fortune in the political Olympic games this year, disinterested spectators are cheered by the name of an old friend, Smith William Brookhart. Until early this year, he enjoyed a place on the new deal payroll as a special adviser on foreign trade. Lacking that advantage, he has entered the Iowa Republican primary against Sen. L. J. Dickinson, whom he accuses stoutly of being a turncoat new dealer. Four other candidates also are in the race.

What does Sen. Brookhart have to offer? What, indeed, could he offer but renewal of his perennial attack on "the money crowd and stock gamblers of Wall Street?" Somehow it is good to know that the effects of the new deal have not been neglected out in Iowa's broad fields as long as the Brookhart voice holds out. An old friend and an old song always are welcome. Wall Street, somewhat chastened, will revive old memories as the Brookhart lash flicks its hardened hide. Sen. Dickinson, furthermore, will be prevented from forgetting too easily that a presidential possibility from Iowa must not get too chummy with wicked easterners.

Glancing Backward

IT WAS WELLNIGHT, April 14, 1926. Charles L. Patten, 85, Civil war veteran who for four years was a caretaker of the White House grounds during the administrations of Presidents Harding and Coolidge, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Lorena Cobb on Cummin Avenue.

The Marion county board of elections moved from its former quarters on the second floor of the city hall to third floor rooms on East Center street formerly occupied by the Eagle lodge.

Miss Helen Snockenberger was hostess to the Mothers club at her home on North State street.

The Young Matrons Embroidery club was entertained by Mrs. Fred W. Warner at her home on Girard Avenue.

Harding in the High school girls club under the direction of Miss Sara T. public school music supervisor, presented the musical comedy, "The Belle of Barcelona," in afternoon and evening performances. The leading parts were taken by Miss Clover Mae Klingel, Herbert Compt, Rex Miller and Miss Mary Heintzinger.

It was Friday, April 14, 1936.

The tension between United States and German governments over the submarine controversy had reached a critical stage and one authority in Washington said that only "a miracle" could prevent a break.

The Germans bombarded the French position on hill No. 504 northwest of Verdun, using gas shells, but the attack was repulsed. The battle of Verdun was in its fifty-second day.

The American government announced emphatically that it would not comply with the demand of Provisional President Carranza of Mexico that the American troops be withdrawn from that country. It was stated that Carranza would be notified within a few days that this government would not change its announced policy to "get" Villa.

Mrs. Catherine Walker, 51, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Christina Arthur, on South Prospect street.

The feature picture at the Columbia was "Such a Little Queen," with Mary Pickford in the leading role. At the Marion, Alice Rindy was shown in "Then I'll Come Back to You." At the Albion John Hyman and Lella McIntyre were heading a cast in the musical comedy "My Home Town Girl," and the bill at the Woodland theater was headed by Cal Mison's colored vaudeville troupe.

Score Even As G.O.P. Hires Brain Trust

Lawrence Points to Error of Putting Theorists in Executive Positions If Practical Decisions Must Be Made.

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright, 1936, by The Marion Star

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The Republicans now have a "brain trust" to help them just as the Democrats—so what's the difference? This query in the last few days suggests that the Republicans have yielded to the academic impulses of their political brethren and that hereafter there will be less ridicule or criticism of the "brain trust."

President Roosevelt on one occasion told friends that he didn't like the phrase "brain trust" but that he did prefer "to put trust in brains." As a matter of fact, college men the country over have been unjustly criticized because of the acts of the group in Washington who have become associated with the new deal, and hence a clearer understanding of what is meant by a "brain trust" is essential.

Had the new deal brought to Washington a group of advisers from the collegiate world and given them purely advisory tasks, there would have been little criticism. Academically trained men are useful in government, but as with any other group unfamiliar with the practical aspects of the subjects which they are to handle, friction results because of that unfamiliarity.

The new deal unquestionably erred, in the view of its critics, by giving positions of major responsibility to its "brain trusters." While professors can bring a fresh point of view and often a more disinterested approach than is possible from the business or economic world, the fact remains that, as between practical experience and pure theory in dealing with questions of economics, more can be accomplished by the experienced and practical persons than by the theorists. As for holders of purpose and fidelity to the new deal itself, there are plenty of persons with practical experience who would serve the government under any administration. Unfortunately, under the new deal, when these honest-minded and conscientious individuals came to grips with the theorists, the powers that be preferred to believe the theorists and to discard the advice of the practical group.

Had the "brain trusters" been merely advisers, there would have been less confusion hereabout. Their views would have registered for what they were worth alongside of other groups of advisers. But the "brain trusters" were given access to the President while men of practical experience, especially in congress, were denied that opportunity except semi-occasionally.

In the drafting of legislation, the "brain trust" formula came a cropper too. Here the conflict arose between the purely theoretical and the practical. Granting that many of the notions that actuated the politically-minded are selfish, the fact remains that men in congress have to face their constituents and hence a knowledge of public psychology gained in the battle of politics is an asset which cannot be lightly regarded.

The college professors attached to the new deal have often clashed with Democrats in congress because the latter insisted that their proposals were impractical. Here again the White House usually sided with the "brain trusters" and the result was a million of responsibility which is not justified either by their limited experience, if any, in the business world or their knowledge of governmental backgrounds.

The presence of presidential advisers from the "brain trust" on Capitol Hill has been responsible for much of the trouble between the government and business—something that it is openly charged has retarded employment—and for much of the disunion inside of the Democratic party.

Under these circumstances, the pledge given by Chairman Fletcher that his "brain trust" is not to be given public office if the Republicans are successful is a recognition of the dangers that have grown up under the new deal. But it is doubtful whether, even if the Republicans were successful, they would be able to keep the ambitious "brain trusters" in their ranks from wishing to become identified with the government. It is a natural and commendable ambition, and there is really nothing wrong even with giving offices to some of the better balanced professors. The real evil is in assigning them to important posts and permitting them to make decisions that ought to be made by persons like the President or the members of the senate and house who are themselves directly responsible to the people in elections.

Brains are always in demand in government and the intelligent college professor of the right kind—those who are not mere fanatics but sincerely anxious to accomplish something for their fellow men—will in the long run be helpful. But the place for brain trusters really is to be of aid in running for congress so they can exercise in their own right the job of making laws for their countrymen.

Behind the News

Men and Affairs Under The Washington Spotlight.

BY PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The Roosevelt good neighbors policy is beginning to get a little involved, upstate, in the question of whom is good, and how good. The state department branch of the official family, for instance, was much perturbed a few days back about having to go to the assistance of an undemocratic Latin-American neighbor, Dictator Carlos of Honduras.

Within the family, it was well understood that State Secretary Hull offered considerable anguish before sending a destroyer after a couple of American boats suspected of smuggling arms from Mexico to Honduras.

Officials around him chimed in on his sigh of relief when the destroyer failed to find the smugglers, if any. Thus the help proved ineffective and the point of the issue was dulled.

An official explanation was issued that an investigation had disclosed no violation of American laws, and thus the department was able to call the whole thing off.

The Honduras dictator, Mr. Carlos, may be said to be the last neighbor in the last house down by the railroad tracks, as far as Mr. Hull is concerned.

Mr. Carlos has just finished a four-year term as president, and has induced his assembly to extend his term another six years, without going to the trouble of having an election.

The only way his opposition can submit him to the people is at the point of a gun. According to all reports, members of the opposition have made excellent preparations to that effect. The betting around here is that they will not be long, whether or not those two particular boats arrived in Honduras with the Mexican arms.

It will be denied officially, of course, but there was only one reason why Mr. Hull was not inclined to be particular about Mr. Carlos's neighborhood record. The Pan-American conference is in the offing and the Latins are sensitive neighbors.

Armed with the fact that some other down in that end of the neighborhood have hinted that they have bigger ideas than ours about running the forthcoming neighborhood conference.

Frankly, their suggestions are getting out of hand. Internal Latin-American politics is beginning to creep in. In proposing the conference, it was, and still is, the intention of this government to confine it solely to peace pacts. But Chile, for some time, has been worried by Argentine armament purchases, especially airplanes. So

New York Notes

O. O. McIntyre's Diary of Fact, Fancy and Folks.

NEW YORK, April 14.—Bob Burns, the raw-boned self-styled first citizen of Van Buren, Ark., and squire of the bazooka, is another of the radio personalities to catapult from the Rudy Vallee hour to prominence. A recent poll elected him the outstanding comic broadcast find of 1935.

He was a small-time clown picking up 45 or 50 here and there around Los Angeles a year or so ago. Last spring he decided to try for the big stuff and he broke down (never hit a shuck for New York). He got on the Vallee program because his hill billy front tickled Vallee.

Then he went over to the Paul Whiteman show and began to climb. Today he's with the Bing Crosby outfit and receives $10,000 a week for the same drawing back country gab he used to peddle for $25 flat. He also has a $14,000 a week movie contract to fill.

He shows every sign of retaining a gar-mouthed, square-toed country boy still driving his rattled-bag car, occupying the same $27.50 a month walk up he rented when arriving on the coast. And clings to a hook on the side that is something of a lulu.

The derby, or hard hat, almost ridiculed to oblivion, is touted to become the what-ho chapeau next fall. The romance is due entirely to news shots of King Edward revealing the jauntness of his favorite bowler. He wears it with tilt and dash that a spurt was given the derby trade in the closing winter months. The season's only gray derbyist was twiggled by Lucius Beebe.

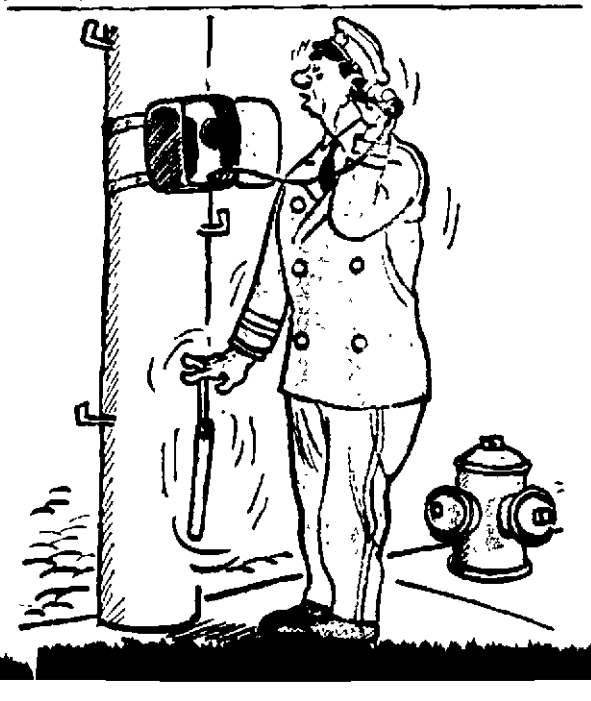

He was Raymond Twyford, who not only sported a peary dicker but a morning coat to match and counted the avenue to turn to state in its stride along that enormous trench.

Two of the celebrity look-alikes are Frank Scully, who connects the fun for the invalid bodies, and Dudley Nichols, whose movie script won the recent Academy award. Not only is their resemblance startling, but they are boon buddies in their rounds of Hollywood.

Slickers for brevity will find something to applaud in a wander past 427 Pearl street, where a tailor window bears this lettered handiwork: "Cing—Dyng—Prag—Regg."

Looking Under Surface

Various Angles Seen in "No-Partisan League."

BY BYRON PRICE
(Chief Editor, The Associated Press, Boston, Massachusetts)

For reasons well hidden—some the surface, the launching of the pro-Roosevelt "labor" or "partisan league" has aspects and possibilities usually lacking to similar ventures.

It always has been a doubtful point whether the "labor" or "partisan league" was ever a serious contender for the presidency. It was lined up with any semblance of satisfactory support by the pro-Roosevelt Republican presidential candidates at any time.

Some labor leaders have, however, that if ever such a thing was possible, it would be in a year like 1936, when class distinctions are much emphasized and party lines badly tangled.

Therefore the advent of the league was certain to attract wide attention. In the beginning of a cohesive political action at such a time, the part of labor? The question cannot be answered at this writing, but one generally-overlooked fact presents itself.

While outwardly the league is dedicated to harmonizing labor support behind the President, certain elements exist within the league at a subtle transformation of the political theater of organized labor's big family feud.

Stifle Is Aims.

For years, two factions within the American Federation of Labor have been at odds. Recently the quarrel has become acute. One faction wants all workers in each big industry organized into one big union. The other wants individual unions based on occupation.

Those who want to organize by industry alone include George L. Berry, head of the printing union, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and Sidney Hillman, president of the CIO. A principal in the other group is Daniel J. Tobin, head of the teamsters.

Berry was chairman of the Democratic national committee, elected in 1932. Tobin had the same position in 1932. For some months now it has appeared as if Tobin, not Berry, would have a job in 1936.

In this situation, Hillman came to Berry with a problem. Hillman is a member of the Socialist party and so are many members of the union. How could they be united? The two of them put their heads together. The league results. They called Lewis a Republican by telephone. He approved the idea.

Foiled William Green.

So far as appears, the league was formed without consultation with William Green, head of the Democratic national committee. Nor is there any indication that William Green, head of the A. F. of L., knew anything about it, or he read the newspapers.

Now where does this leave one concerned? If Roosevelt is elected, will credit for his support go to Berry, Lewis or Hillman, instead of Tobin? And so, will the faction have lost at all? While Hillman knows the policy and labor legislation.

Will the league lay the F. of L. dog, not only in matters of politics, but with respect to internal affairs of organized labor as well?

Berry's friends deny that the league was formed as a nucleus for a labor party in 1940. Yet in the troubled times, it is impossible for anyone to be sure what may come of such group movements as this. The league is intended to consider the three possibilities: the league actually will succeed in harmonizing labor support behind the President, that it will succeed in nothing and will go the way of many another "non-partisan" political venture, or finally that it will lead to one grand and orderly row in the ranks of organized labor.

No. 1 Topic

Publication of the agenda for the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in Washington April 23-25, significantly reveals that the issue how to increase employment given the No. 1 position.

This means, apparently, that chamber intends to and that President Roosevelt issued a message to congress on relief appropriations the coming fiscal year. The president said:

"Those who believe that government may be compelled to assume greater responsibilities in the solution of our industrial system, make no valid objection to a renewed effort on the part of government to insure a balanced and all-willing workers. These are all hands who believe in a complete freedom of private enterprise without any government participation should earnestly undertake to demonstrate their effectiveness in increasing employment."

Differences Continue

There has been no end of the gulf which separates the administration and business of question of relief. The difference will continue until after elections in November.

Industry apparently still is convinced it has done or is doing as much as it can to bring about a national recovery and that government policies are responsible at least in part for the unemployment. These efforts, however, result of those efforts. Commerce the United States has gone as to investigate a pamphlet, again asserting that "political obstacles" stand in the way of recovery.

The subject is certain to be into in great detail at the coming session of the Chamber. Both the immediate and the range problems and the unemployment will be current accomplishments and industry.

—At Marion's— THEATERS

COMEDY AND DRAMA
INTEREST IN FILM
ON PALACE SCREEN

Roland Young provides the comedy. Loretta Young and Franchot Tone the heart interest and Lewis Home lends his usual dignity to "The Unguarded Hour," the current picture which will run through Wednesday at the Palace.

What appears to be a couple of good murders keep the audience on edge and challenge one's wit providing they entertain secret ambitions to try their hand at solving mysteries.

Tone, as a rising young English barrister and Miss Young, as his wife, see position and glory ahead with the former's appointment to the office of attorney general of the English court. Disaster enters into the plot with Tone, prosecutor for the crown, demanding the life of a man whose only hope is that some unknown woman, on the scene at the time he is charged with pushing his wife over a cliff, will come forward and repeat his warning to his wife to "not go too near the edge."

Miss Young, knowing her husband's ambition to be the next attorney general, allows herself to be blackmailed in order to quash a scandal, and as the plot proceeds the attorney for the crown finds himself as a defendant before the law. Stone as the general of Scotland Yard does a bit of grilling on his own hook, and Roland Young as Bunny, the family friend holds the spotlight for several hundred feet in a clever bit of explanation of Tone, in order to prove that unusual circumstances often do exist.

Tone in the white wig of the English court is a much more serious and sedate chap in this picture than in his usual woad, and the lovely Miss Young is lovelier, as his wife. The supporting cast is equal to the four some leads and the audience has a laugh coming in the baptizing of a lusty-lunged young man for which Roland Young has to pinch-hit as the godfather.

News and a Betty Boop short complete the bill.

CALLES ONCE MORE IN EXILE

Detective Romero General Calles

"I am very tired—I have nothing to say," was the comment made by General Plutarco Calles, former dictator of Mexico, when he arrived at Los Angeles airport, above, after he had again been exiled to United States. Detective Eddie Romero is at the left. Calles was forced to leave Mexico by President Lázaro Cárdenas, allegedly because of a train wreck which the Mexican government charged Calles followed with engineering.

Soviet Considers Law To Strengthen Marriage Ties

MOSCOW.—In Hollywood scenario language, "Love has come to the Soviet Union."

That emotion heretofore considered not quite in keeping with Communist principles, now is declared to be the basis of proletarian marriage. Widely publicized, the cause of love has received moral support in a campaign to secure divorce and extra-marital relations and legal backing in a wide campaign against alimony jumpers and former husbands who dodge support of their children.

The campaign for a high birth rate, it is reported soon will result in a device prohibiting abortions. Already this phase of Soviet medical practice has been limited.

An official report gave the number of alimony cases reaching the courts during 1935 as 200,000 which "tended to increase." F. Nurlina, assistant state prosecutor, reported on these alimony cases, said: "We will revise the marriage laws, and suggest:

"1.—To increase the amount of alimony.
"2.—To punish severely up to three years imprisonment, those who refuse to pay alimony.
"3.—To enter in his passport (every citizen must have a passport) the fact that a husband has been brought to court because he refused to pay alimony.
"At present deserters of wives cause us a good deal of trouble because they conceal where they live. Trying to find them the Commissariat of Home Affairs spends much money. We suggest that these expenditures must be paid by these husbands. When some alimony dodger discovers that aside from the alimony he must pay several hundred rubles apiece to find him he will come to a realization of his offense. At the same time this measure will make others think thoroughly before deserting their children."

"We suggest and believe that the government will approve these measures."

Nurlina's report, aside from the legal aspects of alimony and divorce, stressed the new concept of love in marriage and the seriousness with which Soviet courts now enter upon that relationship.

In a period when new culture is being created, he said, "the question of family and marriage acquires an especial significance."

"Speaking of marriage, Engels stated, 'The new phase in the family life will set in only when there will come a new generation of men who have never bought women's love on material basis, and a new generation of women who have never sold their love on material grounds.'"

Points to New Generation
"We have this new generation of men and women. They build their married life on the base of a deep mutual feeling.
"In a bourgeois state the woman is first of all a source of cheap and obedient labor. It is easier to keep woman than man under submission. The woman having children cannot participate in social or political life and her field of vision is limited.
"What has changed in our country is the condition that enables us to build the family on a new base. It is possible to coordinate happy motherhood with creative work. We have conditions that help the woman to master knowledge and culture. We need many children not for conquests but to build a new society.
"Citing statistics to show the development of culture among women and the advantages of painless childbirth and economic considerations for the expectant mother, the woman prosecutor continued:
"Love is the basis upon which Soviet marriage is built. Where there is love and mutual respect there is marriage. Submission and obedience which characterize the bourgeois marriage do not exist in our country. When a husband and wife find that there is something wrong in their life and think that it is better for them to part, they part.

"Still there exists, however, a petty bourgeois tendency to turn petty socialism as a society in which everything is permitted, which involves irresponsibility, especially in marriage.
"There still exists in our country people who 'feeling tired of married life' make the necessary arrangements and desert their families, apparently feeling sure that the state will care for their children. They commit a crime against Soviet law, and although they are indulgent to them, we will revise the law."
Alimony, as construed in some law, is paid for support of children only. As women are considered to be economically independent, a divorced wife is not entitled to support if at all at the time of divorce either a husband or wife is entitled to six months support or the other party.
